Augmented reality (AR) is an interactive experience of a real-world environment where the objects that reside in the real-world are "augmented" by computer-generated perceptual information, sometimes across multiple sensory modalities, including visual, auditory, haptic, somatosensory, and olfactory. The overlaid sensory information can be constructive (i.e. additive to the natural environment ...

Like virtual reality, augmented reality is becoming an emerging platform in new application areas for museums, edutainment, home entertainment, research, industry, and the art communities using novel approaches which have taken augmented reality beyond traditional eye-worn or hand-held displays.

Spatial Augmented Reality: Merging Real and Virtual Worlds

Virtual reality (VR) is an interactive computer-generated experience taking place within a simulated environment. It incorporates mainly auditory and visual feedback, but may also allow other types of sensory feedback like haptic. This immersive environment can be similar to the real world or it can be fantastical.

Augmented Reality (AR) and Virtual Reality (VR) are technologies that allow users to interact with a computer-generated environment. AR overlays digital information onto the real world, while VR creates a completely immersive virtual environment. Both technologies have a wide range of applications, from entertainment and education to healthcare and industry. The AES E-Library provides a comprehensive collection of research papers and articles related to these technologies, covering topics such as user experience, hardware, software, and applications. The library is fully searchable and accessible online, making it a valuable resource for researchers, students, and professionals in the field. The AES E-Library includes every AES paper published at a convention, conference or in the Journal.
