„Piet Mondrian (1872–1944) was a Dutch abstract painter who created a unique style of geometric abstraction. He is best known for his black lines on a white background, forming a grid of squares and rectangles. His work is a key part of the De Stijl movement, which sought to create a new visual language based on the fundamental forms of nature and the human environment. Mondrian's art is a reflection of his belief in the power of geometry and the importance of balance and harmony in design. His work has influenced many other artists and designers, and is still widely admired today.
